For more information about being a part of Boston Pride, please contact any TCNE Director, Officer or e-mail ROSEBUDS.

A TRANSSEXUAL JOURNEY PART 2 By Frances Cardullo

I've changed my mind (that's a woman's prerogative). I'm not making part two all about the three years leading up to my GRS. Rather I think it more appropriate to write about the "Frank" years. They were fun filled years and I don't regret them but I do regret not transitioning sooner. There is, however a "time for everything" as stated in Ecclesiastes. What a conundrum but maybe you will understand it better as I present my bio as Frank.

I was born on June 19th, 1940. My parents moved to Winchester, from Arlington, in 1946 when they purchased a home at 101 High Street. To put technology into perspective, when I picked up the telephone, at age 6, there was no dial tone. We had to wait for an operator. Dial tones, along with dial phones, came later and the "Parkview" exchange was eventually changed to 729.

Most of my early education was at Brown and Nichols School (at the time, an all boys school) in Cambridge. This was way before it became BB&N. When I was 8 or so, my brother, Richard, and I would walk to Harvard Square after school and wait for my dad - who owned the famous Wursthau restaurant in Harvard Square - to drive us home.

In 1956, my brother and I transferred to Winchester High. It was a life-changing but positive experience for me, one that has enriched my life considerably. or the first time I felt part of the wonderful community that we called Winchester. I will always have fond memories of my two years at Winchester High. Academically, I was average but I had a passion for electronics and quickly became involved in WHSR - "at 91.9 on your FM dial, the home of the Satchems".

After graduation, I spent a year at Chauncy Hall prep school (did I say I was academically average) and was accepted for the will give internet users another location to find out about TCNE. Membership in the group is free and open to anybody according to the Moderator of the Group. Memberships and messages will be reviewed by the moderator before being put up on the site. The reason for needing approval is to keep "Spam" off the site. The site will contain information on TCNE programs and events. The Yahoo Group is in addition to the message boards and e-mail list that are part of the main Tiffany website at: www.tcne.org. You can access the Tiffany Club Yahoo Group at:

One of the Groups is called, "Girls Nite Out. They have Groups for Boston, Providence, New Hampshire and Maine. You can access each Group by going to the main GNO Group website at: <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/girlsniteout/>. "We're all working to help the Transgendered community and we hope to be able to do a better job by working together on various projects of mutual interest", said Club Vice President Cheryl Easton.

class of 1963 at Tufts and M.I.T. I chose Tufts in Medford because it was close to home and had a small campus. If I had it to do all over again, I would have chosen to live on campus, further away.

When I dropped out of the Air Force ROTC at Tufts in 1963, I was drafted. I had obtained my pilots license in 1959 and thought about a career in the Air Force but decided that I didn't want to make the five-year commitment. In March of 1964, I completed my six months of basic training and advanced individual training. (Since I had a background in electronics, I was schooled as a company clerk because I knew how to type! Typical of the military!) After my active duty, I entered the family businesses in Harvard Square by getting involved in the Gourmet Shoppe.

A historical note about the Cardullo's in Harvard Square: In 1943, my father purchased the Wursthau restaurant, which had been established in 1917. It was a famous eatery with rich German foods and imported beers. For years it was the place to be seen in. (John F. Kennedy frequented it during his years at Harvard.) He operated this popular oak-walled restaurant and bar, with the help of my brother until June of 1996 when it was closed forever due to upscale commercialization of Harvard Square. This marked the end of an era in Harvard Square.

In 1950, my father opened Cardullo's Gourmet Shoppe at Six Brattle Street in Harvard Square. He was a visionary who predicted that because of the international culture of Harvard University and the opening of global airline travel, customers would be looking for international foods. Cardullo's continues to this day as one of the few remaining family-run businesses in Harvard Square, which stocks a rich array of international specialty foods. As of this writing, I am currently operating Cardullo's but look forward to the day when it will be run by a third generation Cardullo – my son Francis Paul.

In September of 1964 I married my first wife Barbara (Bobbie) and we had 4 beautiful children, Francesca – born 1965, Donez – born 1967, Frank – born 1969 and Marc Anthony – born 1970.

At the end of December 1969, I quit the family business and started the decade of the 1970's unemployed. It wasn't as bad as it sounds since I had made quite a bit of money in the stock market back then. For a while I dabbled in photography (which I still do) and eventually opened a company called AIR industries at Hanscom Field. The acronym AIR had a double meaning: Aircraft Instruction and Rental and Avionics Installed and Repaired.

During this period I continued my flight training and got my Commercial, Multi Engine, Instrument licenses, and finally my Airline Transport Pilot rating – the Ph.D. of flying. Eventually I closed AIR Industries.

It was also on this trip that the gender issues that I had been trying to run away from resurfaced.

I took a series of flying jobs – the worst of which was flying night cargo out of Logan in less than well-maintained twin-engine aircraft. Several years later, I quit this job when I was invited to fly as co-pilot on the Lear Jet owned by F. Lee Bailey, the noted trial lawyer. The Lear was leased out to Jet America and I eventually became a Lear Jet captain working for Jet America.

In 1975, Bobbie and I parted company, and in 1976, in reaction to my “mid-life crisis,” I bought a new BMW motorcycle. I had always wanted one but had to overcome my fears of riding. Most beginners would opt for a 250 cc bike. Not me. Mine was the biggest bike available at the time: a 900 cc cycle – the same model that BMW raced at Daytona in 1974, 1975 and 1976. I still have this bike today.

In May of 1977, I headed south on my motorcycle and didn't return home until after Labor Day. I had been on the road for four months and put 16,800 miles on the bike. It was a dream trip that I could spend pages writing about. It was a life changing experience as I made many new friends and found a flying job in Ohio. It was on this trip that I overcame a lot (but not all) of my fears. It was also on this trip that the gender issues that I had been trying to run away from resurfaced. Let's just say that one has a lot of time to think about a lot of things riding solo on a motorcycle for eight to ten hours a day.

Next month in part the Frances will continue her bio leading up to GRS

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

By Cheryl Easton

June is a very important month for Tiffany every year. It's the month we meet more potential Members than we do at any other time of the year. The annual Boston Pride Parade and Festival will be held on June 11th.

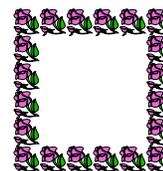

The parade begins at Noon and the Festival on Boston Common runs through the day. TCNE will march in the parade and have a booth at the Festival. We need as many people as possible to be involved in the day. TCNE is the largest Transgender organization in New England. Yet, every year we get less than 20% of our Members to come out and support the Club on what is a very important day. If people don't participate, we're sending a message that this club is not important and should not be considered seriously as a force in the New England GLBT community.

If that's the message that we project, we won't get people interested in becoming Members. No Members means no money and lost chances to help people that need help in dealing with being Transgendered. Recently, a survey was taken at Spring Fling about TCNE. Current, former and Non-Members were asked for their impressions of the club.

Some of the answers included that Tiffany was a difficult organization to deal with. People also said that a lot of Members were, "stuck up and unfriendly". The comments were not what we wanted to hear, but we needed to hear them and work to do a better job to support and help our brothers and sisters.

TRANS NEWS FROM AROUND THE WORLD

The National Center for Transgender Equality celebrates the planned introduction of the first major explicitly transgender-inclusive piece of federal legislation.

Scheduled for introduction in the U.S. House of Representatives this Thursday, May 26, the Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2005 would help protect against bias crimes based on gender identity, sexual orientation, gender and disability. The bill would also add gender identity to the Hate Crimes Statistics Act.

Currently eight states and the District of Columbia have hate crimes laws that include coverage for transgender people. And already this year inclusive state hate crimes bills have passed the Maryland and Colorado General Assemblies and await the signatures of the respective governors.

NCTE congratulates trans advocates and our allies whose hard work made the introduction of this bill possible.

We also applaud and thank the lead sponsors of the legislation: Reps. Barney Frank, D-Mass.; Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Fla.; John Conyers Jr., D-Mich.; Christopher Shays, R-Conn.; and Tammy Baldwin, D-Wis.

The San Francisco Giants recently held something called "Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Singles Night." The Giants have held two of these things, and both times they've sold out. And according to the San Jose Mercury News, teams like the Chicago Cubs and Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia 76ers have held "gay days" in their respective parks and arenas.

At the Miss Tiffany Universe Pageant which boasts dozens of gorgeous, lithe, smooth-skinned contestants one thing is undeniable: Thailand turns out some of the most beautiful transvestites and transsexuals in the world.

As contestants glided across the stage in glittering ball gowns Saturday night, one might never have guessed they were all born boys. Only when they open their mouths do their vocal cords reveal the truth.

"Most people can't tell because I'm very petite, but when I talk, they know," said 21-year-old Wararat Saengchai, who started taking female hormones at 14 and underwent sex change and breast implant operations a year ago. If she keeps quiet, her delicate features could fool anyone. Others must rely on foam-padded bras and girdles to create womanly curves.

Miss Tiffany's, one of the most famous all-male cabaret theaters, has held the annual beauty pageant since 1998 in a gaudy Roman-pillared white building in Pattaya.

Thailand, a predominantly Buddhist country, is widely tolerant of homosexuals, transvestites and transsexuals one reason, perhaps, that men who opt for the transformation here are so stunning and convincing.

"Western countries may not give their people the opportunity to change because they can't accept it, whereas here, we do," said Punyapat Daengnoi, 24, who underwent a sex change two years ago. "We become beautiful because we are accepted and can be happy that we can be ourselves."

Many contestants came from rural provinces across Thailand and describe being accepted by their families only after proving that they would be academically and professionally successful, and not a financial burden.

But for others, like the 2005 winner Tiptantree Rujiranon, there needs to be even greater acceptance. Even this pageant broadcast live on national television, with a grand prize of $2,500 and a new pink car is not enough.

"There are some who still will not come out," 20-year-old Tiptantree said after being crowned early Sunday. "I want 'second-sex' women to be able to live in society like men and women, and have the same rights as people of any other gender."

SPRING FLING 2005

By Sarah Thompson
President, TCNE

May in Provincetown with the Tiffany Club means Spring Fling. This year's fling was from my view a positive vote that we continue this fifteen plus year tradition. We had 64 girls join us for three days of fun and relaxation. Friday began with a visit to Bayside Betsy's for a delicious meal. Realizing that the rain might have put a damper on the girl's sprits I was pleasantly surprised when I walked into the banquet room at 6:30 pm on Saturday evening. A loud buzz of activity and a sea of smiling faces greeted me. Our esteemed disc jockey Ms Brenda had music playing in the background. I looked around the room again expecting to see gloomy faces matching the weather. Not at all what I saw, we had an excellent turn out for the banquet over 45 girls in attendance all with smiling faces. A second smaller group had gone out to start the evening festivities in town. After dinner I made a small teeny presentation, I was trying to gauge the success of our flings and to find out what the girls wanted to see us change or not change. I have had input from well over a dozen girls and I will bring their comments to the TCNE Board of Directors so that we can improve next years Spring Fling. When I asked the group if we should continue with these events at Provincetown the answer was a resounding YES!!! The highlight of the evening was also quite unexpected Donna a first time visitor to one of our events presented us with a unique piece of artwork to commemorate

A TRIP TO THE CAPE

By Debra Kelly

You probably thought, Debra went to Cape Cod, but Debra actually went up to Cape Ann on May 12 instead. One of the responsibilities of my job is that I am required to be in court to represent my company at hearings. However, those hearings generally do not last all day. In fact, many times they get over before noon and I have the rest of the day to myself. On Thursday, May 12, that situation presented itself. I knew ahead of time that I was going to be in Cambridge at the District Court and that there was a strong possibility that it would get over early since it was scheduled at 8:45 AM. However, I knew since it involves the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it would not start timely. I have been doing this for over 10 years and court has never started on time. When it does not start on time, it can drag out in the afternoon. The U.S. Army will start on time, but the civil side of the government never has and never will.

I parked my car at Alewife MBTA station and left my female clothing and accessories in the car since it would avoid a trip back to the South Shore where I live to get changed. The clubhouse for Tiffany is in Waltham, which is about a 15 minute to 20 minutes from the Alewife station. Court as you guessed it, did not start on time. The ventilation system in the courthouse is kaput and it was a miserable 90 degrees in the courtroom. My hay fever was acting up really bad that day also. Needless to say I was not feeling well. However, a small miracle occurred. We were the first case called for trial. My client was direct and to the point. The plaintiff got a little windy so the magistrate told him to stop. We were out of the courthouse by 10:30 AM. As soon as I got outside, I started to feel better. One it was about 30-40 degrees cooler outside and the air was circulating. Hay fever was a little better. However, knowing that I would be dressed as a woman within the hour revived me completely.

I made it to the club I then shaved and put on my make up and then dressed. I dressed in classic Debra. Black panties, bra, garter belt and stockings, lacy black slip, black skirt and a green/ blue blouse covered with a gray jacket. I also had my new wig, which I got at New England Hair Illusions in Tyngsboro, MA. Route 128 at the noon hour was not bad. I was expecting some traffic, but not a problem that day. I took 128 all the way up to Gloucester. I had never been to the northern terminus of 128. One thing I can say, it is not anything like around the metropolitan Boston area. I took Route 127 to the Town of Rockport, which is north of Gloucester. I had never been there either so I just followed the road in and it took me to the center of town. Close to the center of town there is metered parking. However, as anyone who knows me, there are certain things in life that one does not pay for if they can help it. Parking is one of them. You can figure out the other in your own mind. Remember, Rosebuds is a family friendly publication.

I was able to get a space on the street without a meter about a 1/2 mile from the center. I then walked down to the water. The breeze felt great on my legs and face, but the fresh ocean air really helps the hay fever. Good thing I used some hairspray on my wig earlier so the hair was in good shape. I went on the pier and saw the famous Motif #1, which is probably one of the most painted and photographed structures on the east coast. Needless to say, I took my trusty HP 407 digital camera and took some shots of it and the harbor. One of the great things about digital cameras, you don't have to pay for developing the dud shots and you can take lots of pictures provided you have a large memory card.

On the pier at the harbor masters office, there are public bathrooms. There is a little lobby area outside of the bathrooms so one can get out of wind or rain if needed. I had no problem using the ladies room on the two occasions I was there. Plenty of stalls if needed. The public library is nearby which would have facilities if needed. Near the center is Bearskin Point, which has many artsy type of places and some restaurants. (Writers note: Rockport is a dry town, but it appears recently they voted to go wet. Bottoms Up!!).

Going out to the point is a nice walk. I certainly had no problem even though I realized I was a little overdressed for it. At the tip of Bearskin Point, you face the ocean. I was going to climb up on the rock to take a picture, but realized two things, my skirt would go up and it was rather early in the season to go swimming in the Atlantic Ocean. Common sense prevailed here.

There was an ice cream parlor there so I stopped and got a chocolate in a dish. Did not want to try a cone since I did not want to add a new color to my make up and wig. It is funny, but 5 years ago, I would have been terrified to order anything. Finally, I had to call it a day. However, I got on to rte 127a, which apparently is the coastal road. I took that in to Gloucester. What a view of the coastline. It was worth the extra miles and time it added. It was tough trying to enjoy the view, keeping control of the car, and keeping the hair out of my eyes. I returned home en femme without incident just a little lighter in the pocketbook and in the gas tank.

To close, I would strong recommend a trip to Cape Anne. The scenery is gorgeous and it is an easy ride.

TRANSAMERICA

Movie review by Miss Veronica Vera

Despite, or perhaps because the movie Transamerica involves a transgender theme, I went with my BS detector tuned to high. How many times has Hollywood sanitized and simplified the complexities of gender variance? Plus, when I mentioned the movie to two transgender friends who had been involved early on in the project they expressed ambivalent feelings about seeing it. Perhaps they did not want to be disappointed. But I was intrigued by the unique story line: a transsexual woman one week before gender re-assignment surgery discovers she fathered a child in her earlier life and must meet him before her therapist will sign the papers for her surgery.

It was a relief not to have to endure yet another man who is forced to wear a dress for some reason beyond his control. Tootsie was and still is a great movie, but we've come a long way, baby. There is life beyond Tootsie. I'm happy to say Transamerica, though a comedy, has more in common with the realism of Boys Don't Cry than with Tootsie. Bree, who lives and works two jobs in Los Angeles receives a call from Toby a teenaged runaway who is calling from a New York City jail in hopes that the father he has never met will bail him out. Bree's mentions the phone call to her therapist (Elizabeth Pena) and tries to make it sound casual, right after she reports she made her quota at work and an eagerly awaited pink sweater arrived in the mail. The therapist, just seconds from signing the much desired recommendation letter puts down her pen. "This is a part of who you are...I just want to be sure you are ready." Ironically, when Bree goes to bail Toby out, he assumes she is church lady doing charity work and she lets him continue to think so. What follows is essentially a road picture with Bree and Toby traveling not just cross-country but across their histories. Transamerica is another highpoint for the transgender movement and a thoroughly entertaining, beautifully crafted movie.

Felicity Huffman plays the lead character "Bree." You will be hearing a lot about her amazing performance, so rather than start with heaping well-deserved praise upon her, I want to acknowledge the honest and powerful story created by Duncan Tucker. This is Tucker's first feature film and it will be a tough act to follow. He does not hit a wrong note. At a Q&A following the fully-packed screening at the Tribeca Film Festival where the film had its U.S. premiere, the writer/director said that he was inspired with the idea after meeting "a lovely woman who told me, a few months into our friendship, that she was a preop transsexual... For every heart-breaking story she told me, there was an improbably funny one." This was how the idea started. Besides the stories his friend shared with him, Tucker talked with many other transsexual women. Some of those he talked with, among them Calpernia Adams and Andrea James (www.deepstealth.com) who also served as advisors, have roles in the movie. Many transgendered persons are thanked in the credits.

Felicity Huffman as Bree

I'm not one to give away too much of the plot. There are many very funny scenes, particularly when we get to meet Bree's parents and her son gets to meet his grandparents.. There is also violence and it socks the audience in the gut. The violence is used to move the story along and illuminate the characters. Duncan Tucker as well as producers Linda Moran and Rene Bastian of Bella-donna Productions had experience communicating the problems of youth, particularly around issues of sex. Tucker taught a film course to GLBT youth at NY's Harvey Milk Institute. Belladonna produced Michael Cuestis award-winning L.I.E., the story of a pedophile. Their efforts combined with the acting talents of young Kevin Zegers made the role of Toby, the newly discovered son equal to that of Bree in intensity. Zegers almost didn't get the part because they thought him too good-looking. But he scruffed himself up and landed the role in which he clearly proves himself to be not just another pretty face.

For her role as "Bree" Felicity Huffman was awarded the Tribeca Film Festivals award for "Best Actress." When I went to the screening, I took my friend Patricia, a transsexual woman. Patricia was prepared to hate the movie. She was convinced that in choosing a non-transgendered actress to play Bree, the filmmakers sought to gloss over the ambiguous elements of a transgendered woman. She was even more riled up because she thought the Felicity who had the lead was the star of the tv show Felicity, the cute young blonde who made big news when she changed her curly hairdo. Patti was wrong on both counts. Felicity Huffman is one of the stars of the hit series Desperate Housewives. She is also a dedicated theater actress who along with her husband William Macy founded the Atlantic Theater Repertory right here in Chelsea, New York. Felicity Huffman accepted the challenges of the role. She lowered her voice and sounded totally believable as someone who had trained her voice to go from male to female. She got so into the character of a person who feels she was born with the wrong body that the first time she tried on the prosthetic penis she wears for the "reveal" scene, Felicity cried.

Patricia gave Transamerica an unequivocal "thumbs up". Following the screening, I asked Duncan Tucker why a transsexual actress had not been cast in the lead. "I would have loved to have used a transsexual woman in the lead," he said. "But I don't know of any with the chops to carry the role." The realities of Hollywood being what they are, it took not only a superbly talented actress but one whose name carried enough clout and cache to give this movie a chance for wide distribution. (As I write this, the film has still not acquired a North American distributor, though I am sure that will come.) The filmmakers' priority was to tell a good story, their commitment was to a movie, not a movement. In truth they did honor to both.

CHRISTINE IS ON THE MOVE AGAIN

By Christine Hochberg
Rosebuds National Correspondent

Yes, I do attend several conventions per year always with a hat and a smile. I recently attended the 19th Annual IFGE convention on Austin, Texas. It turned out to be a virtual who's who of the TG world. The best part was all the local "T" girls and boys who donated their valuable assistance.

In all my 17 years of pushing the envelope I've seen how hard it is to get volunteers. The job, family and financial restrictions plus the fears that have to be overcome are often too much to handle. I have to say that all the volunteers for the events around the country are quite awesome in their hard work and dedication to the program.

To see America is quite special. I was born and raised in the San Fernando Valley in Southern California. Previous to traveling for events I had never been outside of the state. Now, I truly look forward to every trip (7 in 2005). No event is ever the same - they all have a different flavor.

I cannot wait to attend the 23rd Annual Be-All. I expect a record number of attendees which is totally awesome.

Plan your calendar now for a new event beginning in 2006. The Glitz Ball will be a three-day weekend held in Phoenix, Arizona in early February. Trans-Events USA who manage the annual IFGE events will be taking over the Ball starting next year and hope to bring a whole new energy and scope to the event.

See ya all in January for First Event 2006!!
